

Comparison and contrasting essay
On Ancient china Ancient Egypt

Maybelline Brown

Have you ever wanted to know how Ancient china and Ancient Egypt are similar and different? Ancient China and Ancient Egypt have their own philosophy in their religion. In Egypt they believed in over 2000 gods and goddesses. In China they had different religions like Confucianism, Daoism, and Buddhism. Ancient China and Ancient Egypt compare and contrast in many ways but here are just a few. In their origins, they're religions and beliefs, and their daily life.

Ancient China and Ancient Egypt's origins are totally different. Ancient china begins along the Huang He River; this river originates in the plateau in the Himalayan Mountains. During summer floods, this river spreads enough silt on land to create miles of fertile farmland. Couldn't continue to let the Huang He flood their season. The population of the area grew because of the success of the farmland. Egyptians life arose from waters along the Nile bank, this river flows North through the heart of Africa to the Mediterranean Sea. The Nile River was a way of life that people, animals, and plants needed to survive in the Nile Valley, because it gave the rich soil cause of silt. This helps grows crops. The first project was building an irrigation system for agricultural purpose. They believed life in the Nile help in the after life. This isn't the only way that Ancient China and Ancient Egypt are similar and different they're also similar and different in their religions.

Religions in Ancient China and in Ancient Egypt are different and yet similar. The "Three Teachings" including Confucianism, Daoism, and Buddhism greatly inspired the Chinese. Confucius thought people about being loyal, selfish, and courteous. Daoism is a philosophy that defines proper conduct for people and governments. Buddhism is to worship

a man who try's not to overcome suffering. Egyptian religion was based polytheism, or worship of many gods. The Egyptians had as many as 2000 gods and goddesses. Often gods and goddesses were represented as part human and part animal. Temples were basically dwelling places for the gods. Each city had a temple built for the god of that city. Ancient China and Ancient Egypt have many differences the way that they are different is in daily life.

Daily life in Ancient China and Ancient Egypt live in different ways and different styles but they are slightly similar. Most people of Ancient China were peasant farmers who grew on small plots of land. Farmers in the North grew wheat, millet, and barley to eat. Because there were few farm animals to produce manure so human poop was used instead. Many farmers used wooden or stone tools even after bronze iron weapons. The people in Ancient Egypt highly valued life, they treasured kids and regarded them a blessing. In lower class families, the mother raised the children. The wealthy and nobility had solves and servants that help takeoff the children by attending to there daily needs. Although women were expected to obey their fathers and husband, they were equal to men in many ways. They had the legal right to particisipate in the business deals, own land, and were expected to represent in court cases.

Ancient China and Ancient Egypt compare and contrast in many ways but here are a few ways they compare and contrast in their origins, religions and beliefs, and last put not least daily life. Ancient China and Ancient Egypt are different and similar but there similarities are very little, their more different tan they are similar.