

Comparison Essay

A world without feelings is like a donut without a jelly filling. That is what I think is the main difference between our world and the Givers world. In my comparison I have found that the Givers world is a better place for everyone because of sameness but I would rather live in our world full of choice and freedom.

In my first statement I found that our world is better because of the choice to buy what we need and what we desire. Unlike in the Givers world they are given what they need but not always what they desire. I will show you why I think this in the paragraph below.

In the Givers world they are given what ever they need but only on special occasions are they given things they want. Unlike us, we buy things we need and desire. The bad thing about this is that if we don't have enough money we sometimes can't only buy what we want but also what we need. In the Givers world they are never left without things they need but most of the time left without things they want. That is one of the reasons I picked our world over the Givers world.

The second statement is the choice to decide your job unlike in the Givers world where you are GIVEN a job that you might like or might dislike. I like being able to choose my future in a desired field of work. This is one thing I wouldn't give up and I hope to show you why below.

There are both pro's and con's about having the choice to pick your job. If you get a good education in our world you have a much better chance of picking what ever job you desire. In the Givers world they get their jobs based on what they did in their recreation time. In our world they don't really care what we do in our spare time as long as we do well in school. If you do not succeed in school you do not end up with a decent occupation in our world. So I guess when I say you get to choose your occupation I guess I'm lying a bit. None the less I would still rather do things our way then the Givers way in getting a job.

In my last statement I would like to bring up the argument of color. We get the opportunity to see color and we probably take it for grant it. In the givers world color only exists to few people in the community. Color is a wonderful thing and if I was put in to the Givers world right now it would be really plain and boring. Like Jonas said in the book " I wish everyone could see color".

You could also bring up the argument that if we didn't have color there would be no racist or blond jokes. Lots of people would rather not have color because of those reasons but I cannot put myself under that list. Even though there are racist comments I still think this world needs color. If we didn't have color we could not experience color T.V, the stars at night or a rainbow.

In my conclusion I find that our world is better then the Givers for one big reason. CHOICE. Choice is one thing I couldn't give up no matter what. I would rather live in our world with Choice and color (even if we aren't the perfect world) than live in a world without choice and color.
