

Learning experiences shape our lives, teach us many things, and create our personalities. Experiences have enriched my life, giving me knowledge to use in future familiarities.

My best learning experience, although difficult, taught me responsibility, good morals, and determination. One of my mom's last requests was that I finish my education. Watching her pass away was devastating. Her request for me to go to college replayed in my mind, teaching me determination. Her strength during this time was contagious, giving me the ability to be strong. Her personality was reflected upon in hard work and taught me good ethics. I am thankful for the knowledge I have gained from my mother.

I was most inspired by the nurse who was there when my mom died. He taught me many things as well. He was a noble worker. He taught consideration and empathy, which eased our bad experience.

My mother's death was my worst experience. It was my hardest learning experience.

I am thankful for my experiences, as they have taught me many things. They will shape my future. This knowledge will help me to reach my goals, significantly to finish my education.

Learning is an important part of life.
