

Today's society is a dangerous and corrupt place. People would lie, cheat, and steal just to make a dollar. People are even taking their parents to court these days. How ludicrous can a person get? A person would sue a tobacco company because they had developed cancer. This is outrageous! For one reason, how could a person just pick on one company in particular. Because of the fact that a person could not smoke just one brand of cigarette. Now if that isn't money hungry I don't know what is.

The consumer is at fault for buying and using the product anyway. On the package of cigarettes it states that the surgeon general warns everyone of the harmful effects that cigarette can cause. The case does state that the cigarette can cause cancer, emphysema, and also lung cancer. Even if the reader is illiterate it still shouldn't matter. The information on the boxes gets around by word of mouth. Second of all, it's no one else's fault for them smoking. The smoker, picks up the cigarette, lights it up, and puffs. Also the cigarette doesn't just jump in your mouth. Anyone who would try to sue a cigarette company should be put away, because they are most definitely insane.

I am a smoker, but I still can't understand why any person would do that. It saddens me to know that people would sink so low just to get some money. The world is getting worse everyday. Maybe someday we'll realize that without each and every one of us working together the earth wouldn't have anything left.
